

Crocodile killing bacteria identified by Top End researchers

- What: A north Australian research team has identified a deadly bacterium responsible for killing saltwater crocodiles at a Top End Wildlife Park. A media conference to discuss the findings will be held at Crocodylus Park in Darwin on Tuesday 1 October 2019
- Who: Menzies School of Health Research researchers Audrey Rachlin and Mark Mayo along with Professor Grahame Webb, world-renowned crocodile biologist.
- Where: Crocodylus Park - 815 McMillans Road, Knuckey Lagoon (opposite the Berrimah Police Centre), Darwin.
- When: Tuesday, 1 October, 9.30 am
- Research: Further details about the research paper are available by contacting – Paul Dale, Communications, marketing and media manager
Phone: 0439 108 754 or (08) 8946 8658
Email: communications@menzies.edu.au

Menzies background

Menzies School of Health Research is one of Australia's leading medical research institutes dedicated to improving Indigenous, global and tropical health. Menzies has a history of over 30 years of scientific discovery and public health achievement. Menzies works at the frontline, joining with partners across the Asia-Pacific as well as Indigenous communities across northern and central Australia. Menzies collaborates to create new knowledge, grow local skills and find enduring solutions to problems that matter.